

The Dawn

written by Meagan Maria Devauld copyright 2016

CH: One word and the pavement falls beneath my feet but that's ok, cause we'll see some day the dawn ain't so far away
there's a new sky, there's a new cry

VS: In a time of desperation
I was waiting for you To help me understand
All the things that I can't undo I was a broken inner nation and didn't have a clue that there was no divide between me and you

I knew a penniless soldier with a reason to die Defend his true nature the mountain's and sky He never understood why they were filled with so much hate now, there's no more peaceful pardon for the lies of today

CH: One word and the pavement falls beneath my feet
but that's ok, cause we'll see some day the dawn ain't so far away
there's a new sky, there's a new cry

VS: Now that I've had to face the history of this race On that fateful morning all it took was a leap of faith There will children on the corner crying out for a savior too I knew I could not stay, as I was one of them too

CORO: No slave to what I've become Revolution has begun

INST:

CH: One word and the pavement falls beneath my feet but that's ok, cuz we'll see some day the dawn aint so far away
there's a new sky, there's a new cry

CORO: No slave to what I've become

Revolution has begun
No slave to what I've become Revolution has begun
No slave to what I've become
Revolution has begun
No slave to what I've become
Revolution has begun